High Yield Instruction for Effective Learning

Get ready to dive into what truly moves learning forward: engaged students and high-impact instruction. This session breaks down the research-based strategies that make lessons come alive—clear structure, purposeful modeling, meaningful tasks, and opportunities for students to think, talk, and actively participate. Teachers will explore practical, research-based ways to design instruction that captures attention and sustains momentum, creating classrooms that are focused, responsive, and alive with learning. When instruction is intentional and high-impact, students don't just stay on task—they lean in, take ownership, and thrive.

Proactive Classroom Management for Effective Teaching and Learning

This interactive session gives teachers practical, high-leverage strategies for creating classrooms that run smoothly and feel good to be in. Grounded in the “Big Five” of proactive management—strong relationships, intentional classroom setup, consistent routines, clear expectations, and supportive behavior strategies—participants will learn how to design environments where students stay focused, connected, and ready to learn. Through real scenarios and hands-on tools, teachers will discover simple shifts that prevent disruptions, boost academic learning time, and build a positive classroom climate from day one.

Effective Assessments that Inform Instruction

This session empowers educators to use assessment as a driving force for smarter, more responsive instruction. Participants will explore how to gather meaningful assessment data, interpret results, and translate those findings into targeted instructional moves that strengthen learning for all students. Through classroom video examples, hands-on analysis, and practical tools, teachers will examine formative and summative practices, alignment between assessment and standards, and strategies for effective follow-on instruction. The session also highlights how to communicate assessment information clearly to students, families, and colleagues, and how to incorporate student self-assessment to build ownership and accountability. Educators will leave with actionable approaches for using assessment—not just to measure learning, but to improve it.
